Who We Are:

What is Lictor? Well it is quite simple; it's a group composed of thinkers with an emphasis on research and an aspiration to be thought leaders. Lictor is operated and managed by a collaboration of current students of higher learning (i.e. universities) and young professionals whom conduct analysis and research of various capacities for portfolio building as well as for their very own entrepreneurial endeavors. We utilize the resources, professionals and scholars available to us, to assist in facilitating value added enhancements to any and all endeavors we pursue.

What We Do:

Specifically we conduct independent research and service learning projects to attempt to either investigate, inform, or offer plausible solutions to specific business and social problems while offering any member of the Lictor team (this includes Directors and Contributors) an opportunity to earn some professional experience (if any) and an undoubted amount of learning, in an environment that leverages and enriches their educational and professional experience and desire to learn more.

Our main portfolio components are:

Portfolios | To build portfolios unique to each Lictor member; it can range from a myriad of things such as case studies; independent research and even working papers or opinions.

Analysis & Research | To enhance the analytical acumen of members of the Lictor organization.

Abstracts & Entrepreneurship | To further the Entrepreneurial aspirations that may exist within members of the organization.

Our Vision

Our vision is simple: Develop valuable thoughts and ideas to be able to apply practical applications in the real world by generating “innovation in ideas”. That’s as generic as it gets. Though it may seem generic, we share the same passion of many other organizations whose aim is to eradicate global poverty, or combat climate change, or provide education for the underprivileged among others. The only difference is each portfolio that is generated here and any research conducted is either undertaken by a Lictor member or collaborated with other organizations. No Lictor Director or Lictor Contributor earns an income. No profits are made. And everything runs on passion.
